FOREIGN TRADE OF MEXICO IS LARGEST EVER

By United Press.

Washington, May 18.—It is interesting to note, as proof of the vitality of the republic of Mexico, that in spite of the disturbance in normal conditions the foreign commerce of the country has been to no appreciable extent affected, and that in fact from the figures of Mexico's fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, (for the year 1912-1913) its foreign commerce was the largest in its history.

Details, as just furnished by Director General Barrett of the Pan American Union, can now be given to substantiate this statement. For example, the entire foreign trade of Mexico, both exports and imports, amounted in 1912-1913, to $248,088,977 (note that all figures are given in the U. S. gold dollar), while in the corresponding period of the previous year, it amounted to $240,325,719. If the exports are considered separately, it will be found that there is an encouraging increase in that movement, the total quantity exported being $150,292,808, against $139,994,564; and that even compared with 1910-1911 a gain was shown. In imports for 1912-1913, Mexico used $98,886,169, and this too was above the amount in the previous year, although the banner year, 1910-1911, was higher by a very small amount.

The interest in such figures can be continued by studying the character of the goods imported to supply the needs of the people of Mexico. For example, in leather goods, which include shoes and such manufactured articles, the country required almost $3,500,000 worth of goods; in textile fabrics, of cotton, wool and silk, the big total of close to $13,000,000 was reached; of machinery and tools there was an importation of over $12,000,000. In the matter of the source of these importations, it can be stated that, as usual, the United States furnished relatively the largest amount, its goods sent to Mexico, over $48,000,000 being more than equal to the sum sent by Great Britain, Germany, France and Spain, in fact, than all Europe put together. Argentina, in South America, has increased its trade with Mexico decidedly during the past year, sending to that country its good products just as it has begun to send them to the United States.

In the matter of exports, it is remarkable that, according to the tables from which the Pan American Union gives this information, industry in general kept on with but small influence against it during the period in question. The amount of gold exported fell from $24,000,000 to $19,000,000. On the other hand copper exports increased to over $18,000,000, where it had been less than $17,000,000 the year before. Coffee and rubber dropped, but chicle (chewing gum ingredient), hides and bone-meal (fiber material), increased. Tobacco and vanilla in-increased in export quantity, but sugar and straw hats fell off. While these variations can be marked, the total exports advanced satisfactorily. The countries taking these products of Mexico occupy the same relative positions. The United States stands easily first, for it received $116,917,000, nearly three quarters of the total exportation, but Great Britain, Germany and France follow with quantities sufficient to preserve a comfortable balance of trade.
